TEACHING:

I teach the following lecture courses every year:

- EVOLUTIONARY BIOLOGY 575. This 3 credit course for seniors and graduate students emphasizes microevolutionary processes. I developed this class as a foundation for our program in evolutionary ecology. The enrollment is usually 30-40 students.
- CONSERVATION BIOLOGY 505. This 3 credit course for juniors, seniors and graduate students provides a broad survey of genetic and ecological considerations for preservation of natural diversity. I developed this course to meet the needs of undergraduates enrolled in both the Biological Sciences major and students enrolled in the Conservation and Environmental Science interdisciplinary major. The enrollment is typically 35-45 students.
- FOUNDATIONS OF BIOLOGICAL SCIENCES 150. This team-taught course is the first semester of our year-long sequence for majors. I lecture on evolutionary biology, animal behavior, and ecology, and supervise labs on topics that compliment lecture material. The typical enrollment in my section is 230 – 300 students.

In addition, every 2-3 years I teach a graduate seminar (927) on one of the following topics:

- Evolution of Mating Systems
- The Ecology and Evolution of Plant-Animal Interactions
- The Ecology and Evolution of Sexual Reproduction.
